WELCOME TO HILO!

Hilo is the oldest port of entry with a population of 38,000, and is the second largest city in Hawaii situated on the east coast of the Big Island (The Orchid Island). The Big Island is just that – BIG. It accounts for 63% of the state (about 4,000 square miles). Shipping and fishing business is significant, plus there's a campus for the University of Hawaii in Hilo. It is believed this was the first island to be inhabited by Polynesian voyagers from the Marquesas Islands, around 700 A.D. Hilo is America's wettest city, over 120 inches annually, and holds the record for the most rain in 24 hours (22.3 inches), set in 1979. Hilo is the gateway to Hawaii Volcanoes National Park, America's most exciting national park, where Kilauea Volcano has erupted every day since 1983.
