An Overview of Honolulu

Geological evidence indicates Honolulu, Oahu evolved two million years ago after the formation of two separate volcanoes. King Kamehameha I (1753 - 1819) unified the islands under one rule and established his palace near what is now King Street.

In 1866, Mark Twain said that every step in the city revealed a new contrast. At one time Waikiki was a swampy marshland of taro patches and rice patties. The land was reclaimed in the early 1900s. Tourism began when the first hotel was built in 1901, the Moana Hotel. Then in 1920 the Royal Hawaiian Hotel opened. Honolulu means, "sheltered bay" in Hawaiian. Honolulu has the only natural harbor in the islands formed by fresh water. Oahu is the third largest island in the Hawaiian chain and has two large backbone mountain ranges with green vegetation. Several attractions are located near the ship's pier. The Maritime Museum salutes the island's diverse ocean heritage, features Polynesian voyaging canoes and The Falls of Clyde, the only fourmast, fully-rigged ship in the world at Pier 7. The Aloha Tower clock, next to the ship, was built by the E. Howard Clock Company of Boston. It weighs seven tons and is still weight-driven with pendulum time.

The distinct district of Waikiki is about three miles east of downtown, conspicuous not only for its towering hotels but also for the furrowed brow of another extinct volcano, Diamond Head. Waikiki is where the action is - an urban beach backed by 175 high-rises with more than 33,000 guest rooms, all along a one-and-a-half mile stretch. Waikiki is 30 minutes from pier. Although Waikiki is a small suburb, and one that most Honolulu residents rarely visit, for package tourists, it's the tail that wags the dog. They spend their days on Waikiki's beaches, and their nights in its hotels, restaurants, and bars; apart from a trip to the nearby Ala Moana shopping mall, the rest of Honolulu might just as well not exist. The city's 850,000 residents represent a melting pot of nationalities. Honolulu is the largest, most remote city on earth. It has the oldest Chinatown in America. Oahu residents own 600,000 vehicles, but only have 1,500 miles of mostly two lane roads. The city hosts the Pro Bowl at Aloha Stadium in February and welcomes five million visitors annually. The setting in Honolulu is beautiful, right on the Pacific Ocean and backed by the dramatic pali (cliffs) of the Ko'olau Mountains. Downtown Honolulu, centered around a group of administrative buildings that date from the final days of the Hawaiian monarchy, nestles at the foot of the extinct Punchbowl Volcano, now a military cemetery. It's a manageable size, and a lot quieter than its glamorous image might suggest. Immediately to the west is livelier Chinatown, while the airport lays four or five miles further west again, just before the sheltered inlet of Pearl Harbor.
